

CABOT.

Mrs. J. I. Stone has been visiting relatives in Rumney a few days.

Willis Fields is visiting his mother, Mrs. J. G. Pike, at Lower Cabot.

Ned Webster has returned from Mary Fletcher hospital and is gaining finely.

Hiram Russell is moving into Will Adams' house at the upper end of Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Webster attended the wedding of Miss Claire Collier and Samuel Daniels.

E. C. Gatchell and two little boys were in town Saturday looking at the sidewalks which his gang of help had made.

Stanley Kenerson has moved his family from the Aubrey Nelson tenement to the upper rooms in A. A. Hopkins' house.

Mrs. Martin Wheeler was called by telephone to Morrisville Tuesday by the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. Mary Jackson.

A good delegation of teachers and scholars went to Montpelier one day last week to visit the legislature and report a pleasant time.

An individual communion service has been presented to the M. E. church by one of the members. It was very acceptably received and highly appreciated.

Twenty-one friends of Mrs. Cecil Foster met at the home of her father, W. I. Stone, last Thursday evening and gave her a genuine surprise, with a generous supply of linens. Refreshments were served and a pleasant evening passed.

EAST BARRE.

There will be a dance at the opera house hall East Barre, Friday evening, November 18. Dancing from 8 to 1. Admission 50c, ladies free. A good time assured you.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

Don't let the baby suffer from eczema, sores or any itching of the skin. Doan's Ointment gives instant relief, cures quickly. Perfectly safe for children. All druggists sell it.

Constipation causes headache, nausea, dizziness, languor, heart palpitation. Drastic physics grip, sicken, weaken the bowels and don't cure. Doan's Regulator acts gently and cures constipation. 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

Never can tell when you'll burn a finger or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas' Eczema Ointment instantly relieves the pain—quickly cures the wound.

RANDOLPH.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Wheeler and Mrs. Ariston Sanford have gone to Saratoga, Florida, for the winter.

Mrs. G. L. Adams of Lowell has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Ellen Charlton, and left for her home on the 12th.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gladding are entertaining Mrs. J. J. Lewis, the widow of the late J. J. Lewis of Queen City park.

Mrs. I. S. Chase accompanied her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Leeds, to Boston and saw Mr. and Mrs. Leeds off on their tour of a year in Arkansas.

Miss Margaret Waitt has come from Sioux City, Ia., to spend the winter with her sister, Mrs. Lory Mann, who is now living in the Stockwell block.

Mrs. A. C. Slack and her daughter have gone to White River Junction to remain with Mr. Slack, who is at work on the new underpass and will be there till after January 1.

Mrs. Marcia Russlow has returned from a two months' stay in Somerville with a sister and is now at the home of her son, Dr. L. A. Russlow, where she will remain for the present.

W. F. Crane left here last of the week for New York, where he will sail for Santa Marta, Colombia, to resume his business after having been the guest of his mother and sister at the home of C. W. A. Putnam, for several days.

The remains of Mrs. J. C. Fuller, who died in Oakland, Cal., three years ago, were cremated and finally sent East. They were received by J. F. Lamson and interred in the family lot on Sunday afternoon, the Rev. Fraser Metzger of the Bethany church officiating.

Mrs. Charlotte Loomis and her son, Barney Loomis, closed their visit of several weeks here last week and went to Northfield and Barre to make their farewell visits before going to Great Falls, Mont., where Mr. Loomis has a run as railroad conductor to Grand Forks, N. D.

MONTPELIER.

An eight-pound daughter was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Soper of Barre street.

The George M. Scribner block on Main street has been bought by H. J. Volholm, who carries on an extensive furniture business, and it is understood that he will improve the property for his own use.

A new sanding apparatus has been installed at Montpelier Junction, by which the sand is dried in a rotary drum, from which it is blown into the sand boxes on the engine. This does away with all shoveling.

L. Clyde Lance of Cabot and Miss Carolyn M. Gearwear of this city were married yesterday by Rev. Ward R. Clark at his home. They are now away on a short wedding trip, after which they will reside in Cabot.

The first meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt estate of Harold A. Flood of Barre was held yesterday at the office of W. N. Theriault, but as no debts were proved and no assets found, it was ordered that no trustee be appointed. In the bankruptcy case of Charles E. Egmonts of this city, the bankrupt has been discharged, the report of the masters having been accepted.

Miss Emily Canfield gave the second in her series of lectures last evening at the Kellogg-Hubbard library hall on "Brave Little Holland." It proved very interesting and the lantern illustrations were much enjoyed. The concluding lecture of the series will be given Saturday evening, a talk on "Sicily and Pompeii." These lectures are given under the auspices of the Woman's club for the benefit of a district nurse fund.

GRANITEVILLE.

Victor Lodge, I. O. O. L. M. U. will hold their regular meeting Friday evening at 6 o'clock sharp.

Teachers' Examinations. The examination of applicants for teachers' certificates will be held in Spaulding high school Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 21 and 22, at 8:30 o'clock.

George Seager.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madsen of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this medicine completely cured him. It's positively guaranteed for stomach, liver or kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c at the Red Cross Pharmacy.

WILLIAMSTOWN.

The high school closed to-day for a short Thanksgiving recess.

Mrs. (Rev.) Fred Daniels of Chelsea has been visiting in this town and in Barre.

George R. Bosworth of Berlin was in town Wednesday and Thursday on one of his business trips.

Quite a number of houses in the village have been newly painted recently in spite of the high price of oil. Few villages are as neatly kept in this respect.

The Village Improvement society, for its second entertainment, which comes Tuesday, Nov. 22, will bring on Edward H. Frye, an impersonator of rare skill. Mr. Frye comes warmly recommended by those in all parts of the country who have been captivated by his performances. This is likely to be one of the best attractions of the season.

It is hoped that there will be a general response to the call for Thanksgiving service Sunday evening at the Congregational church. All the churches unite, and the general public is invited. The union chorus will provide music for the occasion. There will be an address on the subject, "Family and Home Life in the Light of Christian Ideals." The service will begin at seven o'clock.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Sousa's Band at the Barre Opera House To-night.

"Music fashions cannot be determined by printers' ink," declared John Philip Sousa a few days ago to a representative for this publication. "The public, in the end, will demand the kind of music it likes best, and not what the critics and writers say ought to be most popular." Mr. Sousa is right. He usually is. He has studied the tastes and wishes of the American public for many years and his present position and success he has had indicates that he has learned the secret of pleasing his hearers. In discussing the phase of the likes or dislikes of the American people for music Sousa said "What we want to do is to get folks interested in good music through the medium of music of less esthetic value than the complex compositions which cannot be understood by those who have heard but little good music. You cannot give them Debussy and Strauss at first and expect them to like it; but because a man cannot understand either of these composers is no reason why he should be musically excommunicated. I have no sympathy for those who would build a Chinese wall around good music and keep out all those who honestly confess that they don't understand it."

"It isn't necessary to provide for the musically untutored music that is trite and cheap. Such music will always exist for the simple reason that there will always be a certain class of people who must evolve from no music whatever music that is worth while through music which requires but little taste or musical intelligence to understand. But they can all be developed as experience is proving. It means only patience and going at it in the right way."

Sousa and his band at the Barre opera house this evening.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi," which the New York Evening Mail describes as "the most successful comedy of Washington life since 'The Senator'" is headed this way and will be the attraction at the opera house next Tuesday, Nov. 22. This play recently finished the longest run in the history of Chicago theatrically, remaining there six months, the greater part of which was in the hottest weather of the past summer, yet so popular was the piece that the business averaged above $5,000.00 a week, which is large for summer receipts.

James Lackaye finds in Senator Langdon, the most congenial of the long list of southern parts, which he ever played, and his success is a matter of newspaper history. Associated with Harry Stubbs as Bud Haines, the brisk young reporter, these two make a pair to conquer. They will be seen here and will be surrounded by the same cast of twenty players who gave them such admirable support all summer. Among these may be mentioned John J. Mahoney, E. T. Roach, John Cavanagh, James P. Hogan, Miss Van Duzen, Carolyn McLean, Elizabeth Dunne and Beatrice Bauer.

There are four sumptuous sets of scenery for the production, representing the lobby of the famous old International hotel in Washington, the dining room of the Mississippians' home in Washington and committee rooms at the capital. The play is all-American, written by Americans about Americans and played by some of the best actors in America. It is not political in the sense of being heavy or factional, but tells a clean story of an intrigue in the U. S. Senate, which failed through honesty.

ALL YOUR STOMACH TROUBLE VANISHES

Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn, Dyspepsia and Other Stomach Distress Goes and You Will Feel Fine in Five Minutes.

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapiesis, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapiesis and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour rising, no belching of indigestible food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal gripping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapiesis is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of dyspepsia, indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

DUCKS OF THE ST. LAWRENCE.

The Goldeneye a Late Comer That Offers the Best of Sport.

With the coming of the first cold snap in northern Canada, wild fowl migration begins toward the St. Lawrence river and the United States. The first to retreat southward before the hurrying frost line are the canvasbacks and the mallards. These birds tarry on intervening waters for very short intervals.

Following these, after having been forced from their summer feeding grounds by much colder weather, come the bluebills, commonly known as broadbills. This species generally migrates intermittently, stopping for weeks at a time, perchance, on some familiar stream or lake. Lazily they retreat before their pursuer, Jack Frost.

On the St. Lawrence river there are many alluring spots among the rushes for the sojourning bluebill. During the months of October and November they offer good hunting to the sportsman who knows how to decoy them to his host hidden in the rushes. The bluebill is not overabundant with intelligence and will come unsuspiciously to a flock of decoys. It is a strange custom of theirs, however, to circle always three times around decoys before alighting. In doing this they have frequently been known to fly directly over the hunter in his boat without paying the slightest attention to him.

In late November, when a cold norther sweeps down from somewhere in the vicinity of the pole, the American goldeneye, which is the hardest of winter-defying ducks, begins its flight toward the South. Driven from Canadian lakes only by their freezing over, this thrifty little whistler drifts east toward the coast of Labrador. But because of the countless thousands of sea fowl with which these waters teem, a great majority of the inland goldeneyes are driven by this in-nous competition for food down into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Later in the winter they find their way in droves up the river, remaining wherever the currents prevent the water from freezing over.

To the sportsman who is willing to hunt in zero weather, the goldeneye has no equal in the character of the hunting offered. Wary perhaps beyond all other species of wildfowl, this duck surely taxes to the utmost the sportsmanship of the hunter. One is generally forced to decoy him from an ice blind erected on the edge of the shore ice. Often the weather is so cold the decoys form ice and either drag anchor or go under. The hunter must clothe himself from head to foot in white, for the sign of anything of color on the white background of snow and ice will immediately excite the suspicion of the birds.

When a duck has been allured to the decoys, the hunter must arise and shoot immediately, for the goldeneye does not take over a few seconds to realize his mistake. On a favorable morning from a spot where the ducks have been previously feeding in numbers, a hunter may bag as many as fifty birds. The goldeneye when cooked properly is fine eating.

THE NEW APPORTIONMENT.

House Is Unwieldy Now and It May Be Much Larger.

One important duty which will probably fall to the lot of the final session of the present Congress is the reapportionment of representatives in the House, says the New York Evening Sun. The constitution provides that representatives shall be apportioned among the several states "according to their respective numbers," and the only restrictions are that the number shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, and that each state shall have at least one representative. The results of the thirteenth census, taken in the current year, will be in the hands of Congress shortly and the problem of fixing a new ratio of representation must therefore soon be faced.

The ratio of inhabitants to representatives, to gether with the membership of the House, has progressed as shown in the following table. Included in the membership totals are the representatives allotted to new states admitted after the various apportionments had been made, as for example, five members from the new state of Oklahoma:

	Members.	Ratio.
Constitution.....	65	30,000
1st census, 1790.....	105	33,000
2d census, 1800.....	142	35,000
3d census, 1810.....	183	35,000
4th census, 1820.....	213	40,000
5th census, 1830.....	245	47,500
6th census, 1840.....	252	70,650
7th census, 1850.....	237	93,425
8th census, 1860.....	243	127,381
9th census, 1870.....	293	131,425
10th census, 1880.....	332	151,911
11th census, 1890.....	357	179,901
12th census, 1900.....	391	194,182

It will be observed that although the House has been enlarged from 186 members in 1810 to 391 members in 1910, the number of inhabitants represented by each legislator has increased enormously—from 35,000 to 194,182. To-day the House is concededly too large for effective debate yet it is most improbable that a proposition for reducing its size would meet with favor. The present House took up the plan of reducing the size of its legislative chamber, but abandoned the scheme when it was realized that a House of over 400 members was almost certain to follow the present course. Even if the House is kept at the 400 mark, the number of inhabitants represented by each legislator will reach the high figure of 220,000, it is estimated.

The alternative evils are easily to be seen, but if the country insists on growing at its present swift rate, the problem of the House becomes more serious with each decade. On the one hand it is considered undesirable that a representative should stand for too large a number of constituents. On the other, there is no question but that the House has lost its old-time prestige by reason of its growth to unwieldy proportions. It may be impracticable for political reasons to cut down the size of the House; but it is to be hoped that there will be a full and careful discussion of the factors involved before the new apportionment is fixed.

Rime of the Ancient Politish.

It was an ancient Politish. That grabbed me by the sleeve, And told the gossamer tale to me Without a "by your leave."

Says he, "The ship was sailin' free, 'Twere back in Nineteen Nine, We'd scraped her bottom good and clean, Of barnacles and Bryan."

"An' she was reelin' off the knots An' slidin' like a snake, When this here Tariff Bill riz up A-bobbin' in her wake."

"An' day an' night it tagged along Till all me time was blue, For fear 'at it would wreck 'em ill, An' what was they 't do?"

"Says I, 'Me merry mates, belay!' An' then I up an' roared, An' grabbed that bloomin' Tariff Bill An' yanked it right aboard."

"Says they 't me, 'Y' elephant! Y' want 't wreck the ship, Leggo that bloomin' Tariff Bill!' An' smote me on the hip."

"An' then they throws me on the deck, Ez cruel ez could be, An' ties the Bill around me neck 'n' drops me in the sea!"

"An' ever since the orful day I never finds no rest, With the same bloomin' Tariff Bill A' hingin' on me chest."

—Success.

TABLE TALK:

"One more slice, Mamma—I want to look like the Ceresota Boy."

CHINA AND AMERICA.

Japanese Opinion on a Possible Understanding Between Them.

In yesterday's issue we published a translation of an editorial appearing in the Hoochi, which concluded with the expressive warning that a Sino-American alliance would gain nothing for China but the destruction of her great wall. It may be that the coiner of this phrase meant that China by entering into an alliance with America would but draw upon herself an attack from the powers whose interests lie to the north of the great wall, while as international relations at present stand the middle kingdom is secured from such an attack. Her outer territories beyond the great wall are at present more under the domination of Russia and Japan than under Chinese rule, and the idea in the mind of the writer in the Hoochi is that the situation, instead of being improved by an alliance would be made much more dangerous for China as an independent kingdom. It is illogical for a Japanese writer to condemn a Sino-American alliance while admitting the benefits that have accrued from the Anglo-Japanese alliance, but while not approving of the arguments of this writer we are quite at one in the belief that for America to enter into an alliance with China would be a serious mistake and would ultimately tend to weaken, rather than strengthen, America's unique position in China, where to-day it is clear she is regarded as the one power whose motives are as unselfish as her ability to help China is undeniable.

Events, however, appear to be shaping themselves in such a way that the time may not be far distant when America will be compelled to alter the course of her international policy and take an active part in the political contest that is growing more keen in the far East. When such time comes, it will mean the abandonment of the well-established policy of non-interference in foreign affairs, and the American people will be definitely committed to a course of action in the orient designed to check and, if possible, defeat the policy of the rival group of powers. It may become inevitable, with the expansion of American interests abroad and the great opportunities there are to-day for financiers of all nationalities to obtain vested rights in Asiatic countries, that the government of the United States will be under the necessity of changing with the times and embarking upon the imperial policy which is now the ambition of all the great powers and has developed to such an extent, in the near East particularly, that international rivalry is unceasing. The contention of the European powers in the near East is rather the result of individual enterprise, while in the far East the powers are carrying out their policies on broader and more imperial lines.

There could be no concealment of America's object if she were to enter into an alliance with China, and whatever the effect in this part of the world the consequences upon the relations of the two great Anglo-Saxon people would be disastrous. The relations between America and England in late years have been strained, politically, although we believe that no two peoples are more firmly bound together by ties of blood and commerce. The trend of events in the far East during the past decade has, unfortunately, led to the separation of England and America, but we believe this to be only a passing phase in the relations of the two countries. Anglo-American relations would certainly be aggravated were America to enter into any alliance with China, while by maintaining her present independent position, continuing to be China's friend and adviser, America will lose nothing in prestige and still remain a great factor in the maintenance of peace between the nations.—From the Japan Advertiser.

The Right Emblem.

"Could you suggest some suitable badge for our 'Don't Worry Club'?" asked the typewriter boarder.

"How would a pine knot do?" asked the Cheerful Idiot.—Indianapolis Journal.

Credit Due.

Now that the excitement and exultation following our splendid Republican victory in New Hampshire has somewhat subsided, it may be timely to say a few words in appreciation of some of the efforts with which we are acquainted in behalf of this splendid success.

All of the candidates from Governor Bass and the congressmen down to the representatives in the legislature were loyal to each other and to the party and worked hard for the general triumph. No such campaign as that of the head of the ticket was ever before recorded in the political history of the state, and during the month preceding election day the united forces of the party rallied around its standard in an unbroken phalanx.

Governor Bass was fortunate, too, in his house support, in his near friends; in the quiet, effective, constant assistance upon his speaking tours of his brother, John F. Bass; and in the fine and fruitful work of William H. Caldwell, secretary of the Bass Republican club of Peterborough; not to mention others.

We feel that much credit also is due to the officers and working members of the state committee, to Chairman Cook and Secretary Musgrave, and to those throughout the state who co-operated with them in the large amount of work which the educational nature of this campaign made necessary.

The Republican cause in New Hampshire in 1910 was fortunate in its candidates and in its platform and, also in the direction of its fortunes by the men chosen for the responsibilities of management.—Concord Monitor.
